- The second edition of the first part, and the First Edition of the second part.
- Thomas Shelton, the first translator of "Don Quixote" into English seems to have entered the service of Theophilus Howard, Lord Howard of Walden, afterwards 2nd Earl of Suffolk, to whom the first part is dedicated. Acquiring a knowledge of Spanish he, during 1607, at the request "of a very deare friend, that was desirous to understand the subject," translated "[the first part of] the Historie of Don Quixote, out of the Spanish Tongue, into the English, in the space of fortie dayes." But after his friend had glanced at his rendering Shelton "cast it aside, where it lay long time neglected in a corner." At the end of four or five years, "at the intreatie of others my friends, I content to let it come to light, conditionally, that some one or other would peruse and amend the errors escaped; my many affaires hindering me from undergoing that labour." The second part has a dedication addressed by Ed. Blount, the publisher, to George Villiers, then Marquis of Buckingham. No mention of Shelton's name is made in any part of the volume, but internal evidence places it to the credit of the translator of the first part.

Thomas Shelton, stenographer, was born in 1601. It is probable that he began life as a writing-master and that he was teaching shorthand before he was 19, for in 1649 he claims to have had more than 30 years' study in the art. He is best known for his "Tachygraphy," a system in common use in the second half of the XVIIth century and the one in which PEPYS wrote his Diary. It is remarkable, however, that the system of Zeiglographia is quite different; the only letters similar being q, r, v, z. Shelton was a zealous puritan and published one theological work. The date of his death is unknown, but it is probable that he died about 1660.

Though all his works were published several times, copies of any edition are now rarely to be met with.
